NOTES

UN - SOUTH-WEST AFRICA: The principal achievement of Secretary-General Waldheim's trip to South Africa and the disputed territory of South-West Africa last week was a three-point agreement that includes a reaffirmation of Pretoria's policy of self-determination and independence for the territory. The agreement provides for the presence of a UN observer, a personal representative of the secretary-general, to assist in achieving this aim, but his role is yet to be negotiated. Waldheim has told the US Mission to the UN that he hopes to secure informal concurrence to the agreement by the Security Council's committee on the territory before inviting Pretoria's Foreign Minister Muller to New York for further talks.
